California Ferret Owners Asked To Do What No One Else Has Ever Done

First Time an Environmental Impact Report Has Been Required to Remove Animal From Prohibited Species List

Exactly What Is Required?

April 8th, 2009
San Diego, CA -

California ferret owners are a bit perplexed by how to do an Environmental Impact Report as required by the California Fish and Game Commission and Governor Arnold Schwarzenegger so the idea of ferret legalization can be furthered.

David Kiene, the staff counsel for the Department of Fish and Game answered our question this way:

Recently you asked the Department of Fish and Game for advice on preparing an Environmental Quality Act pursuant to the California Environmental Quality Act to accompany a regulation allowing personal ownership of (domestic) ferrets. The Department does not have any specific recommendations for choosing a consultant who can prepare and EIR satisfactory to the Fish and Game Commission, though there are likely to be several suitable consultants located in the San Diego area.

The problem we are running into is there is no precedence. An EIR has never been used to remove an animal from the prohibited species list. EIR consultants have been reluctant to take on this project because it has never been done before.

But we are confident that in this big state of California someone knows how to complete an EIR, or secure a Negative Declaration so that California can join the other 48 states where ferrets are legal.
